2021 marks the 100th anniversary of the Remembrance Poppy in Canada the First World War. distribution of the Poppy on Armistice Day as a way to raise money for Madame Anna Guérin, later christened "The Poppy Lady from France", Veterans' needs and to remember those who had given their lives during inspired by John McCrae's "In Flanders Fields", had an idea: to adopt the

as the flower of Remembrance with other Veteran groups to form the Canadian Legion) adopted the Poppy In July of 1921 the Great War Veterans Association (which in 1925 would unify

Forget to Remember

I've walked past the cenotaph more times than there are hours in a day, But if you asked me to recite a single name from the monument, I don't think I could say I simply stroll right by, overlooking the soldiers and their fight, But I preach love and remembrance in the Legion poems I write

Every student stands in perfect and complete silence at the sound of the brass, But we later complain to our friends about missing our favourite class Instead of giving those men and women our utmost respect, We sit and think about how our morning is slowly being wrecked

On that one special day, we don red poppies proudly on our breast, But when the ceremony is over, we leave them in a drawer for a year-long rest Along with the flower, we leave our compassion and care, But it will surely return next year, just like the cold November air

At the end of each day, we return home to see our fathers and brothers We take our freedom and our family for granted, just like so many others We do not think about those who left their loved ones without saying goodbye Or those who left home to fight proudly, not imagining they would die

While we all want to seem appreciative, empathetic, and polite, We should learn that taking an interest in veterans for only one day is not right There are three hundred and sixty-five days to honour their strength and grit, But it seems as if by November twelfth we want to stop and quit

It is time we look at those who fought with more than our half-hearted admiration Treat them like the heroes they are, the ones that fought for our nation It is not enough to show recognition and gratitude once a November It is a shame, but we are slowly beginning to forget to remember
